A mountain village in Iran: Our car halts under linden trees, The heart of a poppy field Opens with a red silky sky, and a warm mild scent. Stepping out on the road, between Qasvin and Kerman A dusty traveler, I open
the thermos bottle,
take the mountain scene And busily look at the map: Where am I? Unknown clusters of homes, strange life,

Kindliness in eyes,

Poem: The Traveler by Amiya Chakravarty

Warm noon's joy spreads under the big leaved trees Beyond the garden hedge, The honeysuckle waves in the grey wind On the wrought iron gate. And in my eyes this lovely picture goes With me as I fare along the lane.
Piano-notes, unmindful on the wind Fill the spring sky with pain.
