Many people believe that those living in western societies are living in complete gender equality - that men and women are treated the same for work opportunities to societal roles. While on a global scale it may be true, there are still a number of issues which make women less valued than their male counterparts.

The Serious Problem With Gender Equality

Gender equality is possible because it has already been proven by people like Woodrow Wilson who believed women can be equal like men. Women proved that they can fight in the military alongside men. They have a basketball team but you still don't allow woman to play football. I know people against Gender Equality will say they do not have the physical strength. Why won't you at least let them prove themselves. If they can join the army in combat they can do anything that men do.

Is gender equality possible? | Debate.org

The entire debate was irrelevant to the resolution. You guys needed to debate "religion" not specific religions (maybe as examples but that's it). Showing that there is sexism in a few religions is not enough, what needed to be shown is that this sexism is a necessary part of religion as a whole and so banning is the only way to have social progress.

US Women Make Strides Toward Equality, But Work Remains ...

When women break free of that stereotype, and men break free of the constraints of masculinity, we will move towards not only equality but full humanity for all. When people are allowed to be fully human, they will not be boringly alike as some might claim, but endlessly diverse.

True gender equality is when both women and men have a voice | Deepika Bharadwaj | TEDxGatewayWomen

A farm simply could not survive without the skilled labor of both men and women, and in this sense men and women's contribution to the economy of the family farm was equal. True, the law clearly favored men, and gave women few formal rights. But in a world where most people made their own food, clothing and shelter,...
