Every bit as good, and maybe even better, than Early Years Volume 1. This is not the Tom Waits that I did not particularly like when I heard him in college. This is beautiful stuff - simple, elegant and heartfelt.

This is the second disc from Tomato Records' two-CD set called Early Years, which spans John Lee Hooker's work with Vee-jay Records. These sessions are as close to the commercial mainstream as this throwback bluesman ever got, which means he wasn't close at all, just not quite as ragged by degree.

Like its predecessor, The Early Years, Vol. 2 consists of demos recorded by Tom Waits in 1971, two years before he released his debut album, Closing Time. "Hope I Don't Fall in Love With You," "Ol' '55," "Grapefruit Moon," and "Old Shoes" later turned up on that album, while "Shiver Me Timbers," "Diamonds on My Windshield," and "Please Call Me Baby" appeared on Waits' second album, The Heart of Saturday Night , in 1974.
